Visibility Effects

Metric	Expected Impact
Shelf standout (visual recognition)	+15–30% vs neutral variants
Brand search uplift	+20–25% for familiar fruit flavours
First-time trial likelihood	+2–3× for familiar flavours
Repeat purchase probability	+40–60% vs neutral/niche flavours

These ranges are conservative estimates based on kids' FMCG category trends.

How??

- consider sprouted millets
- consider adding real strawberry pieces so that the pancake can be eaten plain also without any toppings(feedback for gladful's included that it's healthy but kids needed toppings)
- use red jowar to highlight the pink color given by strawberry & beetroot powder.
- consider using purple sweet potato powder to enhance the depth of the color

Quick comparison table (mental shortcut)

Effect on beet pink

Red jowar

✓ Enhances warmth

Wheat / oats

⚠ Slight washout

Rice

✗ Very washed

Ragi

✗✗ Kills colour

YES. You will get the pink-looking pancakes you want.

Like... actually pink, not “maybe pink in good lighting” 😊

But I’m going to anchor this with very clear conditions, so you don’t get surprised later.

Why I’m confident saying YES

When you combine:

- 🌾 Red jowar → warm, non-cancelling base
- 🟪 Purple sweet potato → stable colour body
- 🟠 Beetroot (micro-dose) → red warmth correction

You’re doing exactly what food formulators do to hit a target hue.

How it aids the SF portfolio

Moves Slurrp Farm from “first foods” → “growing-up foods” seamlessly.

Strawberry improves top-of-funnel conversion for the entire pancake category.

Within the pancake portfolio:

- Classic/vanilla = parent-safe
- Experimental flavours = differentiation
- Strawberry = child-pull

This means strawberry:

- converts new households
- reduces resistance from picky eaters
- increases first-time pancake trials

How it aids the SF portfolio

Every strong kids' portfolio needs:

- SKUs parents approve
- SKUs kids demand

Strawberry sits perfectly in the middle:

- still ingredient-clean
- but emotionally appealing

Portfolio impact:

Reduces over-reliance on “parent-only” decision products.

Increases basket size and multi-category penetration.

As a category leader:

- Slurrr Farm isn't just expected to innovate in nutrition
- It's expected to own the most loved flavours

Not having strawberry in pancakes would actually look like a gap.

Signals completeness and maturity of the pancake range.

Strawberry pancake mix strengthens the portfolio by bridging early childhood trust with growing-child consumption, while acting as a high-conversion, high-visibility entry SKU.
